His Highness the Maharaja, having permitted Mr. V. P. Madhava Rao to retire from the Office of Dewan, desires to take this opportunity of placing on record his appreciation of the services rendered by him to the Mysore State. Entering the service in the year 1870, Mr. Madhava Rao rose in the course of nine years to the position of Sub-Judge and was appointed a Deputy Commissioner in 1885. In 1892 he was specially selected for the post of Inspector-General of Police. On the outbreak of plague in Mysore in 1898 he was entrusted with the difficult and responsible task of carrying out plague preventive measures, under the designation of Plague Commissioner. He was appointed a Member of Council the same year, and in 1899 his distinguished services were recognized by the Paramount Power and he was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. In 1904 he retired from the Mysore service to take up the post of Dewan to His Highness the Maharaja of Travancore. Two years later he was recalled to Mysore and appointed Dewan. Throughout his long service Mr. Madhava Rao has been distinguished for the zeal and energy that he has displayed in the performance of his public duties, and His Highness the Maharaja is conscious that in bidding him farewell he is losing the services of an able public servant.
